PROGRAMS AT THE NATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP

Saturday November 12th, 2011 evening

“Genetics & Genomics of the Domestic Dog”

Presented by Mark Neff Ph.D

Director, Program for Canine Health and Performance; Associate Professor, Center for Cancer Genomics and Computational Biology; Head, Laboratory of Neurogenetics and Canine Behavior. Dr. Neff received his Ph.D. in Biological Sciences in yeast genetics from the University of Virginia and completed a postdoctoral fellowship in canine genetics and genomics at the University of California, Berkeley. Most recently, he served as Associate Director of the Veterinary Genetics Laboratory at the University of California, Davis. Dr. Neff joined VARI as scientific investigator and Director of the newly established Program for Canine Health and Performance across both VARI and the Translational Genomics Research Institute in 2009.

Van Andel Institute is committed to improving the health and enhancing the lives of current and future generations through disease research and science education. Cancer research is our primary focus, but studies branch out into other diseases such as osteoporosis, Parkinson disease, and diabetes. Our researchers work to translate discoveries at the molecular level into effective therapies for patients.

The domestication of the dog and the diversification of its breeds is an epic experiment in biology. For centuries, breeders have selectively bred for differences in size, shape, and behavior. Breed-defining hallmark traits stem from alterations in the progenitor blueprint of the wolf, and thus provide a rare context for teasing out the mechanisms that have driven the evolution of mammalian form and function. Moreover, the role of dogs in society has also created a chance to explore the basis of complex disease. The dog naturally suffers the same disease susceptibilities that we face, from multifactorial cancer risks to complex psychiatric illnesses. Breed populations are ideal for applying genetics and genomics to identify causal mutations. The clinical setting of veterinary medicine represents a simplified path for translating discoveries into evidence-based, personalized medicine, which is expected to have reciprocal benefits for both canine and human patients.

Genetic samples will be collected for research- all Pointers are welcome.

Tuesday November 15th, 2011 Midday

"Holistic approach to the canine athlete"

Presented by SANDY ZIEMSKI , DVM, CVA, CAVCA
Canine Rehabilitation, Acupuncture & Chiropractic Care

Dr. Ziemski grew up in Baltimore, Maryland. After graduation from Virginia-Maryland Regional College of Veterinary Medicine in 1990, she moved to California where she practiced small animal medicine. After working in several day practices as well as the Monterey Peninsula-Salinas Veterinary Emergency Clinic, Dr. Ziemski opened her own practice in 1997. After 5 years of practice ownership she decided to move back to the east coast where nearly all of her immediate and extended family resides.

While in California Dr. Ziemski became certified in Acupuncture through the International Veterinary Acupuncture Society, achieved second level Reiki, completed the Veterinary Orthopedic Manipulation course and completed a 200 hour certification course in massage techniques at the Monterey Institute of Touch. She also completed the certification course for Animal Chiropractic at Parker College of Chiropractic in Dallas, Texas in 2007. Dr. Ziemski's special interest include working with the canine athlete as she trains and competes with her own dogs in agility, Hunt Tests rally and obedience. The skills and special techniques have been very useful for treating sudden injuries as well as keeping the aging athlete comfortable and able to continue to compete.

Dr Ziemski will offer canine adjustments both before and after her presentation.
